

FAIR GO ON FOOTPATHS

A disability advocate has praised Monash Council's new Footpath Trading and Access Policy, set to be introduced in Glen Waverley and Oakleigh.

Monash resident Chris Stewart, who is legally blind, said the changes would allow him to easily traverse the footpaths.

"I commend Monash Council for having the courage to implement this policy," Mr Stewart said.

"As a resident it is pleasing to see the Council trying to find a balance which meets the needs of everyone trying to use the shopping strip."

Mr Stewart said he would be more likely to visit a shopping precinct that allowed him to concentrate on speaking with his family, rather than having to give all of his attention to navigating his way through tables, chairs and A-frame signage.

Monash Mayor Greg Male said the Council had spent the past couple of years consulting with traders and would meet every trader to discuss their needs in the lead up to the changeover.

"Speaking with people like Mr Stewart allows us to see first-hand the need for unimpeded access to our shopping precincts," Cr Male said.

The policy aims to enable equity of access for all as defined in the Commonwealth Disability Discrimination Act (1992). It is also a result of recommendations by the Human Rights and Equal Opportunity Commission (HREOC) and consistent with similar policies adopted by other local government areas across Melbourne.

The Monash Footpath Trading & Access Policy will come into effect on 1 September, following Council's recent decision to extend the implementation date.

"We recognise that traders will need time to adjust to this new policy and will be speaking to all traders one-on-one to assist them to comply with this new policy," Cr Male said.

A brochure explaining the new policy is available from the Monash Civic Centre, Oakleigh Service Centre, by phoning 9518 3577 or visit www.monash.vic.gov.au [m]

PLANET SAVERS

Move over Captain Planet, Monash Council's annual World Environment Day Award winners have taken centre stage.

The annual awards ceremony was held last week to celebrate World Environment Day (5 June), with former Deputy Premier John Thwaites giving the keynote speech on the night.

Judges were overwhelmed by the quality of entries received, with the Monash community again proving that its environmental credentials were very strong.

The Greenest Household winner, the Panzera Family, have set a positive example for the rest of Monash, with their very environmentally friendly home.

Judges of the category said the sustainable features of the Panzera household were impressive, including an edible garden, insulation in the walls and ceilings, energy efficient lighting and solar panels, to name a few.

"The sustainability strategies introduced by this household are clearly delivering benefits to the home and local community," judges said.

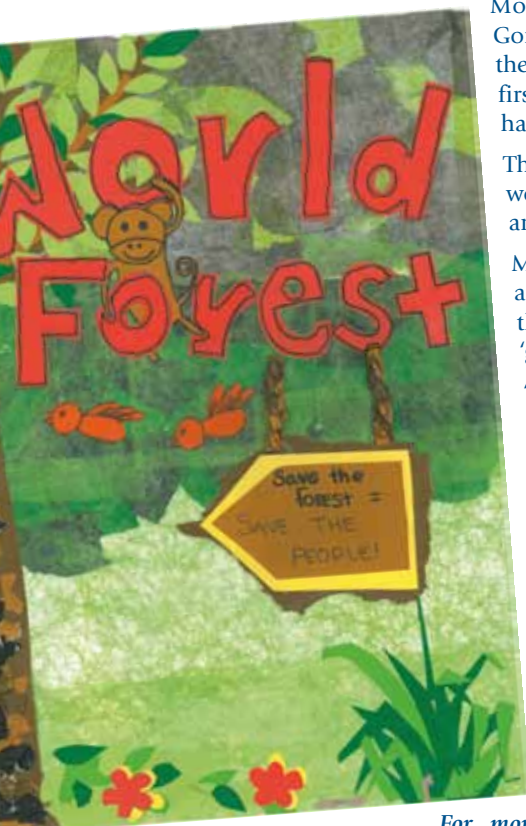

Columbia Park Child Care Centre was named the Business Award winner, while Damper Creek Collective received the Community Award for their dedication to their cause.

Monash University's James Gormley Bike Arrival Station won the Built Environment Award, the first year the Award had been handed out.

The school poster categories were won by Han Kim (Syndal South) and Jacinta Miao (Highvale).

"World Environment Day reminds us all of the importance of living sustainably and reducing our footprint on the planet... each and every year we are reminded about the passion of the Monash community at this Awards ceremony," Cr Male said.

The World Environment Day Awards are sponsored by Cetec, Fonterra, Mirvac, Monash Weekly and Visy.

PUBLIC TREE OPTIONS BRANCHING OUT

The 'Public Tree Survey' will ask residents to comment on which of three options they prefer:

- » The first option is to continue with Council's current approach, only removing public trees in declining or dangerous condition or where damage to property cannot be prevented with mitigation measures such as root tree barriers.
- » The second option involves a more relaxed approach with particular consideration of the views of the adjoining residents to a public tree. The reasons for removal would be broader than those listed in 'Option 1' so as to also include the removal of otherwise healthy trees dropping a lot of tree litter and causing a nuisance (such as berries causing slippage, tree roots uplifting foundations) and those reasonably suspected of contributing to damage to private property.
- » The third option also includes the broader reasons for the removal of a public tree contemplated in 'Option 2' but requires Council to consult even wider, seeking the views of not only adjoining residents but also residents in the immediate local area.

Trees in Monash will continue to be a talking point in the coming months and Council wants everyone to be part of that conversation.

Council has now commenced the first of two consultations as part of its review on the way trees are managed in the municipality.

Following an internal evaluation of Council's approach to vegetation management, last month it was resolved to consult the community on possible changes to the approach of managing public trees on streets and in parks and reserves.

Monash Mayor Greg Male said it was important that residents understand that the 'Public Tree Survey' relates only to those trees in Monash's streets, parks and reserves. It does not include trees on private property or trees located in a Vegetation Protection Overlay (VPO) area.

"From the feedback that we have received from residents thus far, trees appear to be an issue that many are passionate about. This is now the chance for everyone to have their say on the way we deal with public trees in our leafy streets, parks and reserves," Cr Male said.

Residents have until 1 July to complete the 'Public Tree Survey' online by visiting www.monash.vic.gov.au. You can also obtain a printed copy of the survey from the Monash Civic Centre, any public library branch, the Oakleigh Service Centre or by phoning 9518 3777. [m]

TREES ON PRIVATE PROPERTY

Following the public tree consultation, all residents living in Vegetation Protection Overlay (VPO) areas will be given a chance to have their say on which of three options proposed by Council they prefer.

Only residents who live in areas covered by a VPO will receive a 'VPO Tree Survey' by direct mail in mid-July. If residents have already expressed their views to Council, we ask them to please also complete the surveys to ensure their comments are accurately recorded in the consultation results. Residents living outside a VPO will also have an opportunity to have their say. [m]

CR LO

Since the February storms, I have met with residents and community groups around the Mount Waverley Ward to hear their concerns and discuss what support Council could provide. As I enter my third year on Council, I am proud to be given the opportunity to provide leadership to better improve our services and facilities for residents. For the Mount Waverley Ward in particular, I am excited to see that Council agreed to install 'no right turn 8am - 4pm' restrictions from Lechte Road and Gordon Road into Stephenson's Road to reduce traffic congestion around the Mount Waverley Secondary College site. It is great to see this outcome happen.

Council has also kick started the Budget process with the 2011/12 draft Budget now on display. I am proud to be one of the leading drivers that advocated for an additional $200,000 to fund projects to assist Council and residents reduce their carbon footprint. Monash Council will continue to be the lowest rating council in metropolitan Melbourne with a modest rate increase of 6 per cent while being able to deliver a healthy budget to improve service delivery, facilities and infrastructure.

Council has also begun the process to consult the community on public trees and large trees on private property within the Vegetation Protection Overlay. So please take some time to let us know what you think!

Please do not hesitate to contact me if you have any questions or enquiries.

Best wishes to you all,
Jieh-Yung

NEW SCULPTURE ADDS TO MGA BIRTHDAY CHEER

The Monash Gallery of Art (MGA) will get an extra special birthday present, with the addition of a new sculpture in the highly-acclaimed MGA Sculpture Park in Wheelers Hill.

As the MGA gets set to celebrate its 21st birthday in June, Collingwood artist Cliff Burt will see his sculpture installed in the MGA Sculpture Park as winner of the $50,000 competition.

MGA director Shaune Lakin said the MGA had been an integral part of the community for the past 21 years, and with initiatives like the Sculpture Park, the gallery would continue to have a big impact in the community.

"We are very proud to be celebrating the gallery's 21st birthday and throughout June we will remember the efforts of everyone who has kept this gallery at the forefront of the Australian arts scene," Dr Lakin said.

The sculpture will feature two columns, one standing 5.4m tall and the other 1.4m and constructed from highly durable weathering steel.

Burt said he considered the site's history, as well as the traditional owners of the land – the Kulin Nation, when he was designing the pieces.

"Public art should first create a visual impact that engages audiences, it should be able to inform views of its intentions, creating a dialogue that provides local, historical and creative information," Burt said.

Judge Ken Scarlett OAM, one of Australia's foremost experts on sculpture, said the sculptures would "stand as dramatic sentinels in the parkland". [m]
